Explaining party politics in its structure and context refers to something that includes power and money. The power that the ruling class exercises through its “stolen/usurped/plundered money” in a frivolous manner through surplus value and the exploitation of workers, implies the perpetuation of a “bankrupt system” from a human, social, moral and ethical point of view. Power means giving orders and commanding in an irresponsible and unethical way and not being held accountable for it, that is, it corresponds to the commission of reckless and irrational acts that reflect a total environmental and organic imbalance. In this way, these people commit crimes against humanity and literally do not pay for the harm they do. Most Brazilian politicians defend policies that will benefit the class that finances them. Yes! It seems obvious, but most of the population does not understand and does not know how to analyze the current situation and this explains the disrespect for science. The “maharajah hunter” was a myth created to deceive the population, using the mass media to make people believe untruths. Nowadays, we have social networks to spread such insults and arbitrary positions that are detrimental to the construction of the Democratic State of Law and social justice.

The “FHC era” represented the regression of work, aligned with the Washington Consensus that determined that market values were superior to human rationality in defense of social well-being and natural resources. Brazil has been dominated by neoliberalism for decades, as Pochmann indicates [1]. Its ideology has given us unemployment, informality, precariousness, violence, crime and lack of access to basic social services that impede the generation of opportunities and human development. The paths taken show that many of the population’s problems have not been resolved, and the individualistic, consumerist and egocentric perspective of life remains.

The liberal-democratic regime in Brazil has allowed the emergence of certain aberrations, “the PT had to stop being a PT supporter”, referring to the expression of Arcary, by distancing itself from popular and labor movements, in contrast to its “opening of legs” to national and international elites who act in defense of their various assets [2]. According to data from the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics (IBGE) (2022), Brazil has a GDP per capita (per person) of over 47 thousand reais, however, we have a minimum wage of 1412 reais. And the question that begs to be asked: Where are the more than 45 thousand reais missing? Concentrated in the hands of millionaires and billionaires who currently total around 60 people, according to information from UOL (2024). Of this amount, little is allocated to essential public services for the population, although it is useful to feed the futile and despicable life led by this minority of the population that seems to care little about social problems. None of these billionaires left the favela and succeeded in life; they are all heirs and invest their large “cash” in financial/speculative capital that does not generate jobs for the people; quite the opposite, it only brings chaos and insecurity to the nation. In this sense, it is necessary to decentralize this income so that it can be invested in public and social policies that can build a fair and democratic society, through a proposal of opportunities for the population. And I am already tired of saying this. Check out the data and information in the following images and, if possible, think and reflect:

Instituto Brasileiro de Geografia e Estatística		Buscar
PIB per capita (R$)	47802.02 2022	42893.72 2021	-
Indústria (%)	-0.2 out 2024	1.0 set 2024	3.0
Comércio (%)	0.4 out 2024	0.6 set 2024	4.4
Serviços (%)	1.1 out 2024	1.0 set 2024	2.7

IBGE (2024)

The discussion about the ends and means that lead to the frequent demoralization of politics, permeates the way in which the bourgeoisie manages to conquer diverse territories. Support for banks is something indelible in the “trenches” of humanity, representing a cruel and oppressive logic against the workers who produce social wealth. It is necessary to weigh the pros and cons of this arduous and mitigating process that operates through information systems and data management.

The Bolsonaro government promised and did not deliver, serving only the spurious interests of its leaders and fanatical and idolatrous followers, trying to convince the population that it is necessary to have a firearm to kill other people, as a “pseudo-form” of defending oneself, lying and misinforming the population through immediate measures by omitting serious, intelligent and concrete ways to solve the people's problems.

The Bolsonaro government has caused a kind of “collective schizophrenia”, completely out of control, by emphasizing the discourse of “god, country, family and freedom”, although it is consciously not “god-fearing” by encouraging hatred in society, even though its insolent and dishonest discourse is made public by the “false prophets” who are followers of the “only your money is mine church”, serving perfectly to indoctrinate and manipulate the “cattle” by buying votes and destroying the country. It also ignores its homeland by increasing poverty and extreme poverty, simultaneously “opening its legs” to neoliberalism with “fascistoid” remnants. This “sect” and this “worm” defends a form of nuclear family (daddy, mommy and little children) that it never followed, because this “leviathan leader” had several children with several women, falling into a bubble of insurmountable and irrefutable contradiction by naturalizing/criminalizing poverty and the most diverse forms of family composition that science proves, however the “donkeys” insist on “neighing” when defending the indefensible in a colossally stupid and bizarre way.

Ending with the false discourse of freedom that is defined according to the purchasing power of each citizen, since freedom in capitalism is determined according to one's purchasing power and ability to be exploited by capital or to be lucky enough to be born an heir and not need to have a formal employment contract to support one's own family, or even to believe in the fallacy of entrepreneurship, undoubtedly deserving to be unmasked in light of the corrosion it has committed against Brazil and humanity. This “ideology of the devil” presented itself with an anti-political discourse and did worse than its predecessors by contaminating the people with its parasitic deist/Christian/neo-Pentecostal/anti-science and art class hatred. It is the so-called “ordinary Joe” who “if you throw a work card at them, they run away”, even though they elaborate the discourse that those who work do not like to work. And long live this “bunch of bums” who have never worked in their lives, but want to live off the work of others.

The unbalanced and irrational narrative has always accompanied Bolsonaro “bozo-boçalnaro” during his strange, controversial and boring political trajectory, enriching himself through public coffers and the “sweat of the worker”. According to Bugalho “it would not be the political class that corrupts the system, but an exclusionary system that corrupts people” [3]. His speech transcends the barriers of common sense by emphasizing his “specialty in killing”, taking over Brazil through the Trumpist/racist/war-mongering/elitist/xenophobic/ultranationalist/capitalist/neoliberal/destructive American influence that is an enemy of humanity. Bolsonaro is a “child of the military dictatorship”, because he knows how to enjoy his privileges that he enjoys at the expense of the working people, fulfilling his role as a “bacon-brained” politician who is bankrolled by the “rotten and parasitic” bourgeoisie.
